"Fresh," "charming." "interesting." and "popular" are a faw of the adjectives used by the reviewers in commending "TRUE TO THE LAST."

Says the New-Tork correspondent of The Boston Transcript is literary gentleman of the highest character);

(a literary gentleman of the highest character):

"Of a more advanced species of interest, and yet aqually removed from the meritirious and extravagant novel, are the writings of Ree, who is sort of Long-Island Goldsmith, whose thoroughly domestic gentles was long ago recognized by his publishers. This writer deals neither in the romance of adventure nor the intrigues of fashion, while his art far surpasses the moral commonplates of the 'poor but pous 'reconstars. He is a very patient observer of men and things around him, and by virtue of an honest sympathy therewith, weaves marraityes of surstained interest, and draws characters which, however humble, are as genuine, in their way, as Edgeworth or Mrs. Inchbald ever conceived; moreover, they appeal to average sympathies and charm rursh households with true pictures and practical examples of worth. Herein Mr. Roe is a benefactor to the masses, and a quiet reformer. The titles of his books indicate their scope—"A Long Look Abead," I've been Thinking," To Love and to be Loved ' natural, domestic and genial are these transcripts of one of the largest spheres of American life; and the last, put published by Derby & Jackson, and entitled 'True to the Last,' is, in many respects, the best of the series. We commend it as uncarceptionable, graphic, unaffected, and instinct with unoatentations but truthful at."
